Introduction

The 21st century education highlights as an instrumental in globalization and internationalization. Investing in education is an invisible tool for nation building. Education is the strongly crucial to develop in civilized society for the morale of teachers to develop caliber in the teachers and public education system. Learners in 21st century must possess both self-direction and an ability to collaborate with individuals, groups and machines. The role of teachers in the classroom can't be denied, at the same times children can't be removed who are central to our hopes of building a better world. Successful teaching to the students in the 21st century, knowledge-based economy requires a different way of teaching. Unfortunately, many teachers do not yet possess the required skills in facilitating 21st century learning.

The traditional lecture based teaching causes disinterest in the era of digitization in Education. Computer or cell phone is useful today for researching, communicating and every walk of life. Teachers require varied type of skills; in multiple ways of delivery, and they must instead become learning facilitators. The technically expert teachers are difficult.

Challenges Faced By Teachers In Higher Education In 21st Century

1) Learning to live is a challenge

One of the greatest challenges in the 21st Century is to unify society. It is necessary to understand each other, to live together with mutual respect and work in teams, to resolve our differences in peaceful ways. Proper methodology to be searched for, geography, languages and civics teaching, and decided policies of inclusion and exclusion from schools, colleges, training and employment. In the era of globalization, we're under global pressure towards greater economic competition. For universal family hood, we must ensure heterogeneous community although common language, history, religion or worldview.

2) The need of transformation in young teachers

To fulfill the mission of preparing young people for bright future of nation, various fundamental changes in the role of teachers are needed. Teachers are accountable representative and complimentary to society to help their children to learn to know, to do, to be, and to live together. As an educator, our commitment is to ensure quality
